Tehran Iran June 1 —(AP)—United States Ambassador Henry F. Grady who has been trying to mediate in the British-Iranian oil dispute called on Nationalist Premier Mohammed Mossadegh today at his home.

His visit followed an indication from a high government official last night that Iran would not formally take over the British-controlled Anglo-Iranian oil company before early next week. This official said the three-man temporary management committee to direct the nationalized oil industry would not go to Khuzistan province area of the company's major installation until after the five days which the company was given to offer suggestions on the takeover.

Grady declined to comment to reporters on the purpose of his visit to Premier Mossadegh. But after the visit Grady met with the Shepheard.

Mossadegh is reported to have told a secret session of the Majlis lower house of parliament yesterday that he was tied hand and foot by the nationalization law it passed a month ago and indicated he would have to enforce it as it now reads. He is said to have suggested that if the Majlis wanted any change in the law it was up to them but the deputies shouted "No."

A memorandum announcing the five-day suggestion period was handed a representative of the oil company Wednesday. Presumably the company has until next Monday to reply.

National Economy Minister Shamseddin Amir Alai was named head of the three-man management committee. He told an Iranian correspondent yesterday that his "prime duty is to maintain peace and order in the Khuzistan area and speed up the general affairs of that province."

He added: "Based on authority given me by the Iranian government I would have complete supervision of the execution of the law of oil nationalization. And with the hope that I have in the enforcement of that law I hope to render a service to my country."

Meanwhile a foreign office spokesman said the international court of justice at the Hague had rejected a British request to appoint an arbiter to settle the dispute over nationalization of the company.

(In the Hague President Jules Basdevant of the court declined to comment on the announcement.)

The Story of Hempstead as Told in a South Arkansas History Published in 1890

EDITORS NOTE: Some Hempstead residents, not many, will recall the "Biographical Historical Memoirs of Southern Arkansas" published in 1890 by the Godspeed Publishing Co. of Chicago, Nashville and St. Louis. It contains a history of counties in this section. One copy in existence is that which the Star is using and was purchased by J. W. Fricks Nov. 7, 1890 at Saratoga. This volume is a prized possession of Mrs. Fricks who is now 89 years old and still lives at Saratoga. She is an aunt of Larry Spates of Hope. The story of Hempstead is on 78 pages of the book and the Star will publish a portion of this history daily.

Chapter XXI

In the matter of location, Hempstead County is situated in the southwest corner of Arkansas, and is bounded on the north by Pike County, on the east by Nevada County, on the south by Red River and on the west by Saline River and Howard County.

Its area is 730 square miles. The greater part is woodland; 685 square miles are yellow loam, and forty-five square miles are alluvial. The surface of the county is undulating or rolling, with small open prairies of black sandy calcareous lands, interspersed among sandy and gravelly hills, and a derrick of limestone of the cretaceous age. The average of lands under cultivation is about 100 acres per square mile.

The county is remarkably well timbered with yellow pine, every variety of oak, gum of several varieties, ash, mulberry, dogwood,

Also leaving the local school system this week was Forney Holt, high school principal, who reported to Fort Sill, Oklahoma for active duty with the army.

Joe Armour, principle of Junior High School, will also serve as High School principal. The new Junior High School, alongside the high school, is expected to be completed in time for the fall term opening.

Irish Diehards Demonstrate Against Queen

Belfast, Northern Ireland, June 1 —(AP)—Queen Elizabeth and Princess Margaret arrived here today for a four day visit amid general police alerts against anti-British extremists.

King George VI stayed in London, recuperating from influenza. As the queen and her younger daughter stepped ashore from the Cruiser Sheffield, police of County Armagh searched the countryside around Cross Maglen for demonstrators who early today burned down the royal customs hut there.

The hut, a large one-story building, burned to the ground along with bales of customs records. Extremists burned down many of these huts in 1937 to protest a visit then by King George and Queen Elizabeth.

The demonstrators again were protesting the continued union of northern Ireland with the British crown. They want to unite the six northern counties with the republic of Ireland.

In Belfast some 3,000 policemen, armed with pistols, were on guard to prevent incidents. Seven miles of rope were strung along the streets to keep back the crowds along the royal route.

Today the queen and the princess were to visit a big farm and factory exhibition, lunch at City hall, and attend a government garden party and dinner.

In the Irish republic to the south, the Dublin headquarters of the Sinn Fein patriot organization flew its black flag today. Under it was this poster:

"The British conqueror still rules. The royal visit means Irishmen failed."

Last week a hand grenade was thrown at the British embassy in Dublin. Leaflets tossed on the embassy steps threatened the lives of the king and queen if they carried out the visit.

Says State Ready to Buy New Cars

Little Rock June 1 —(AP)—State Senator Ellis Fagan of Little Rock says the state administration is all set to purchase without bids 40 to 50 new automobiles for the state police if act 242 of 1961 becomes law next week.

Governor McMath says it isn't so. A couple of automobile dealers said they'd like to know where to get their hands on that many new cars. State Police Director Herman Lindsey said it was news to him. And State Purchasing Agent Carl Parker said purchases could not be made without bids under act 242.

The act is the administration-sponsored "liberalized" purchasing measure passed by the 1961 general assembly. It'll become law June 7 unless petitions now being circulated are filed before then with sufficient signatures to refer it to popular vote at the 1962 general election.

Fagan made his statement in a civic club speech here yesterday.

Truck Damages Light Post

Malik Takes Over as UN President

United Nations N. Y. June 1 — (AP)—Russia's Jacob A. Malik became president of the U. N. security council today but there was no indication when the council would hold its first meeting of the month.

It was the first time the Soviet delegates has been president since last August — when he paralyzed the council for an entire month by procedural maneuvering. He has shown no signs of repeating this performance.

The council presidency rotates each month with each member serving a month. Last year Malik ended a seven-month boycott of the council to take the chair.

For the past week or so there has been some speculation as to what Malik would do as president. Some thought he might raise the Korean issue which now has been transferred from the council to the general assembly. Or he might renew his efforts to seat Communist China in the council.

The only problems now actively under consideration by the council are the India-Pakistan dispute over Kashmir and the Syrian-Lebanese dispute. Malik would have to call a meeting if any member requested but there is no indication among the other delegates of such a meeting unless one is absolutely necessary.

Pullman Hikes Rates 15 Per Cent

Washington June 1 — (AP)—The Pullman company has increased its rates by 15 per cent.

The sleeping car rate boost went into effect at midnight after the interstate commerce commission decided late yesterday not to interfere with the new rate schedule announced by Pullman company 30 days in advance for June 1.

The ICC made no immediate public announcement of its action. But commission sources said in answer to a query that the ICC voted not to intervene.

The company said it needed to make higher charges because of increased operating costs.

It Would Be Irony If a Little Thing Like a Doll Should Break Stalin's Hold

By HAL BOYLE New York. —(AP)—Rambling remarks by a pavement Plato: A dog in the experimental laboratory of a great New York hospital suddenly began to get fat. Keenly interested, the doctors gave it a complete medical check up. Their diagnosis: A nutritional upset. The staff dietitians were called in. The surprised dog was subjected to all kinds of varying diet. But it kept right on gaining weight.

Interest in the case grew as the dog grew. Were they on the trail of something new in medical analysis? But recently the red faced doctors lost all interest in the case. The dog had pupped.

Russian girls are angry. They complain all the time they buy look alike—same dresses, same hairdos, same faces.

They want their dolls to look different. And the Moscow Literary Gazette says they're right. It has called on the Russian toy industry to make up and produce more variety in its dolls.

But from this distance it looks as if "different" and the political bureau has nothing to do with extreme caution in doll-making. Little holes can break the mightiest dyke. And once the dam of conformity is broken, the flood of individuality pours down.

Why should the Russian girls want their dolls to look different? It's a question of politics and economics. They don't care to be different from the political bureau in the eyes of the young generation.

If dolls are allowed to look like themselves, the human beings in the Soviet Union for the same principle. They want to be different from the political bureau. They want to be different from the political bureau.

It's a question of politics and economics. They don't care to be different from the political bureau in the eyes of the young generation.

Speaking of children, a lady of my acquaintance told ruefully of an example of juvenile independence in her own home.

Her small daughter dropped a toy on the floor and was told to pick it up.

"You pick it up," said the mother. "This isn't Mother's Day."

And then she got a quick response interview with a husband.

Many kindred things have been said about politics in human life. The two that stick most in my mind.

The art of getting things done is the art of getting things done. The art of getting things done is the art of getting things done.

But the advice that has been given me more often than any other is: "Get a chance to do it." You get a chance to do it. You get a chance to do it.

Reds Bolster Defense, Guard Massing Areas

Tokyo June 1 — (AP)—Communists bolstered their vital in ridge lines, guarding the Yalu River area in North Korea.

An Allied tank patrol backed into Yangju at the end of Hwachon river, eastern front Friday night, second straight day. It was its way in Thursday. Friday, no opposition.

Communist troops briefly posed Allied patrols along 120-mile Korean front, between the two ends of Hwachon river. Gains up to two miles reported near Hwachon.

On the western front, Communist staff officers said Chinese troops had advanced to the village Chong-ni, threatening a supply triangle.

Reds stream into the north of the 38th parallel, and the concentration of their offensives. They lifted their positions by around 100 yards. Some dragged new artillery pieces through the mud and rain on facing U. N. positions.

An American official said that the Reds plan new attacks in an effort to break up the U. N. counter-offensive. One purpose of the Allied drive was to try to touch off a Red infantry attack, bringing it to a halt.

A United Nations patrol fought its way north of Yongpo on the road to Chongwon. Communist positions in the valley were hit and artillery halted other armor units. And a hot battle raged in the area.

Miss Truman Arrives in England

Cork England June 1.—(AP)—Gay and talkative Margaret Truman arrived today on the Limer America for a holiday tour of England and Europe.

And off shipboard the reporters fired questions at the 27-year-old daughter of the American President and she fired back answers. Does she believe she will find romance among the suave continentalers or the young blades of Socialist Britain?

Will Father Harry run again in 1952?

"Oh please no politics! You know as much about it as I do."

"How did she like the looks of Ireland?"

"Oh what a beautiful morning! Oh what a beautiful green!"

On board to meet Miss Truman was Nicholas Lakas U. S. vice consul at Cork whom she knew when both were students at George Washington university.

Lakas presented her with a shillelagh or Irish cudgel. Miss Truman hefted the club thoughtfully and said:

"I will send this on to the White House — and I'll expect to find it there when I return."

There was general laughter at this hint that Papa Truman might be tempted to use it in her absence on some of his critics.

All-Star Cast in Saenger Film Sunday

Susan Hayward, Dan Dailey and George Sanders, one of the season's brightest star rosters, hold down the leading roles in the much heralded film attraction due Sunday at the Saenger Theatre, "I Can Get It For You Wholesale."

Based on the best selling novel of Jerome Weidman which attracted wide attention by virtue of breaking new fictional ground, the Twentieth Century-Fox motion picture has been brought to the screen under the guidance of veteran producer Sol C. Siegel and rising young director Michael Gordon.

The background for the story of "I Can Get It For You Wholesale" is the fabulous and teeming garment industry of New York and advance reports indicate that the film does for this aspect of metropolitan life what "All About Eve" did for the people of the theatre. The drama of a woman of fashion's rise to power in the business world, at the cost of walking over a few people on her way up, Weidman's movie told a frank and penetrating story of excessive ambition.

For Susan Hayward the central part in "I Can Get It For You Wholesale" is another in a series of important roles at the Twentieth Century-Fox studios. Recently seen in "I'll Climb the Highest Mountain" and "Rawhide" and soon to be seen in "David and Bathsheba" Miss Hayward's film stock is zooming to new heights.

For Dan Dailey the new romantic drama and his role of a sharp-shooter salesman is a fast change of pace from his musical pictures in "Call Me Mister" and comedies like "When Willie Comes Marching Home." George Sanders, an Academy Award nominee for his stellar performance in "All About Eve" makes his first appearance since that notable triumph.

The supporting cast of the film is headed by Sam Jaffe, distinguished stage and screen character actor. Other participants are Randy Stuart; Marvin Kaplan, Harry Von Zell; Barba Whiting a talented young lady; Vicki Cummings, popular Broadway stage comedienne; Ross Elliott Richard Lane and Mary Phillips.

Director Gordon, whose previous effort was the much praised "Cy-rano de Bergerac" of Jose Ferrer, undertook extensive location shooting in New York to guarantee "I Can Get It For You Wholesale" authenticity. The screen play was written by Abraham Polonsky and the adaptation of Weidman's novel was prepared by Vera Caspary.

Sinatra's Wife to Get Divorce

Hollywood, May 30 (AP)—Frank Sinatra, whose singing once caused bobbysoxers to screech, soon may be free to warble a marriage proposal to sexy Ava Gardner.

Their international romance bridged a major barrier yesterday with Mrs. Nancy Sinatra announced she will give the spindly crooner a divorce.

The Sinatras have been legally separated since last September. That apparently was not satisfactory to Sinatra, as his wife said: "Mr. Sinatra wanted a divorce and I thought it would be best to give it to him."

Mrs. Sinatra's attorney is in New York conferring with her husband's counsel.

The crooner has been commuting between New York and Hollywood in the waning of the sultry brunette movie queen. He once pursued her to Spain, a trip that figured largely in Mrs. Sinatra's original separate maintenance action.

Miss Gardner answered all questions about the reported marriage plans with "no comment." Sinatra said the same thing through a press agent.

If Mrs. Sinatra gets a California divorce, as indicated, it will be a year before Sinatra can remarry. A Nevada divorce takes only six weeks.

DOROTHY DIX

Grandma No Doormat

Dear Dorothy Dix: My married daughter has two children, aged 2 and 3 years. They all visit me daily, just plopping in and upsetting my routine, house and peace of mind. The children are into everything and break things all over the house. I have tried correcting them, but they don't listen. What can I tell my daughter and son-in-law to improve things? I don't want to hurt them but I can't take much more.

GRANDMOTHER ALICE

Answer: What a blessed world this would be if things only struck a happy medium! On my right hand is a pile of letters from grieving grandmothers who never see their married children or their grandchildren, and on my left hand are letters like this from grandmothers whose lives are disrupted by too much attention from the younger generation.

Her Housework Must Suffer

What I'd like to know is, when does your daughter get her housework done? It seems to me that with a husband and two small children she'd have so much to keep her busy home she wouldn't have time to be on your hands so much.

Having raised your own family, you certainly deserve a rest now, instead of having to cope daily with two youngsters who are undoubtedly adorable, but who are also at the most active and destructive age. They're too young to understand much correcting and the best way to prevent breakage is to keep things out of their way.

As for the fundamental problems of how to make their visits less frequent, could you engage the services of the family doctor to tell daughter that your health does not permit these daily visits? He certainly would not be trifling with the truth, as you are obviously nervous and need more quiet.

Of course, you could tell your daughter yourself, but she'd probably pay more attention if the warning came officially. Her intentions undoubtedly are good; she may feel you enjoy having the youngsters around every day, and a gentle hint may be enough to make her see the light. Youth is thoughtless, but not hard.

Children get used to being dependent on Mom for everything, and after marriage they continue to return to the maternal roof, toting the babies along and never realizing that the years are catching up with mother and she just can't stand the wear and tear of active grandchildren as well as she stood it with her own small fry.

Dear Dorothy Dix: I am 24. He is 41. We have been married six months. Within a week I realized our marriage was a mistake. Here are some of my difficulties. My husband was previously married and widowed. Has two children living with a married sister, all of whom visit us regularly; an ordeal for me. His ignorance nearly drives me to distraction. He has nothing to say in company. Evenings when I wish to dance or go to a place of amusement he claims fatigue and the necessity of arising at 7 in the morning, so we can't go out. I have no parents and was poor, so I married thinking a home would suffice, but too late I have learned that a support is insufficient for happiness. Do you think separation would be the best course for me to take?

MRS. D. R. N.

Answer: Your trouble is solely that you married without love and you are paying the penalty of a mercenary marriage. Your complaints against your husband are not worth considering. If he is not a brilliant conversationalist, you were bound to have known that before marriage. Nor are you ill-used because he does not wish to go out to please a amusement of average after a long day's work. And certainly you have no right to object to his sister and his children coming to see him. You are lucky that they do not live with you.

I agree with you that if you are so unhappy and discontented after six months of wedlock, it is better to end the farce of such a marriage at once rather than go through a long-drawn-out lifetime of misery. But if you do leave this good man, don't ask for alimony. Don't expect him to support you when you have reneged on your end of the bargain.

Dear Mis Dix: My boy friend is in the army, and may be gone two or three years. We are more or less engaged but have no definite date set for marriage. Should I accept dates with other boys and tell my boy friend or accept them and not tell him?

Answer: As you don't say anything about not accepting the dates, I think your feelings for your boy friend cannot be too involved, and I think this "more or less" engagement better be called off. Then accept all the dates you can get, but be sure to let your soldier know about them. Don't be a snook or a liar. Whatever you do, let it be in the open.

Dorothy Dix cannot answer personal mail. She sheds new light on an old problem in leaflet D-3, "Mothers-in-law." To obtain a copy, send a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope to Miss Dix, c/o this newspaper, P. O. Box 96, Times Square Station, New York 18, N. Y.

Dear Dorothy Dix: I have a daughter (only child) who is almost 13. On Monday nights she goes to Girl Scout meetings; on Wednesday nights she takes dancing lessons, with my husband or me taking her into town and calling for her; on Friday nights she goes to the school dances with the gang. We have always encouraged her to bring her friends home and have tried to make them feel welcome and have some refreshments handy. We have never objected if some boy walked her home from dances and have let her go out at night with the gang as long as there were chaperones along, or go anywhere in the daytime with out chaperones. Now she has met a boy at dancing school who seems to be very nice and is well-mannered. He wants to take her to the movies, which is about six blocks from our home, on Saturday night. Her father objects, saying she is too young to start going out with the boy in the evening. I told her to ask the boy over Saturday night to play records and dance on which television but she says that would be boring and that we are treating her like a baby. Do you think we are wrong, and being a little old-fashioned? At what age should a girl be allowed to have dates at night? I will appreciate any help you can give me.

Answer: Your daughter is a very lucky girl to be allowed the freedom she has, and to have such understanding parents.

Others Woe Off

If she could see the pile of mail I get from girls 17, 18 and even 20, whose parents never permit them out at night, she would cease to bemoan her fate and settle down to enjoying the blessings with which Heaven has showered her.

The problem of the age at which a girl should be permitted to go out alone with boys at night is not one with an arbitrary solution. The right age for one girl would not be the right age for another. In some communities where a group of boys and girls have grown up together from babyhood, where their families are all intimate friends and where the places of amusement frequented are known to all families, the problem is usually settled without too much fuss.

However, where the boy is a stranger to the girl's family, the parents, naturally feel that they must exercise more caution, and the problem becomes more involved. Another very important factor is the character of the girl. Is she close enough to her parents to confide in them, and to ask questions that she knows will be frankly answered? Does she have enough judgment to keep away from places which will do her reputation no good?

To my mind, a girl under 14 does not have the judgment or the sense of responsibility to warrant her dating at night. Your daughter is too young to go to the movies with a boy alone at night. Let her wait another year. In the meantime the social program she is now following is certainly a praiseworthy one, and should keep her well occupied.

Probably the boy's parents aren't too keen on the idea of the youngsters going out at night, either, and they'll welcome the co-operation you are extending to keep them both from growing up too fast.

Dear Dorothy Dix: My husband works all day long and is so tired when he comes home at night that he does not feel like going out. I am tired, too, from my day's work in the home and taking care of my baby, and I would like to stay at home, but he insists on my going out and plans out a program for me. He believes that husbands and wives should have affairs with other men and women and tell each other about them. He says that I have no sense because I cannot see that for husbands an wives to philander is the way to enjoy life. Says he is going to quit me unless I stop being puritanical. I know I have to do as he wishes if I continue to live with him, and it almost crushes my life to do it. Yet I love him and would do anything in the world for him that would please him. Do you think this kind of life will work and bring us happiness?

Answer: I certainly don't. No marriage in the world will stand the strain of a philandering husband and wife, each having their little extra-marital affairs. You cannot be both bond and free, and marriage is bondage. It is two peoples binding themselves together of their own will and accord. It is giving themselves to each other. It is belonging to each other. And when you break that tie the whole thing goes to pieces.

Also, there is human nature to be considered and it is not possible for any man who loves his wife, or who even has any decency of feeling regarding her, to want her to have love affairs with other men. No woman is under any obligation

Clark Gable's Wife Seeks a Divorce

Hollywood, June 1.—(AP)—Mrs. Clark Gable sailed for Honolulu today after filing suit for divorce yesterday.

Described as "a woman on the verge of a nervous breakdown," the former Lady Sylvia Ashley boarded a schooner yacht last night and immediately secluded herself below deck.

She's positively heartbroken," said her brother-in-law Basil Black who acted as her spokesman. Her breakup with the 50-year-old showman came less than 18 months after their marriage, the fourth for each. She charged mental cruelty.

"I am taking this step with the deepest reluctance and under severe pressure," Mrs. Gable 40 said yesterday in a statement "all of my effort for a reconciliation were fruitless."

A spokesman for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer where Gable is making a picture reported: "Mrs. Gable has nothing to say."

World's Greatest Motion Picture
 The world's greatest motion picture, "The Ten Commandments," is now playing in all theaters. This is a story of the greatest of all men, Moses, who led his people out of Egypt. The picture is a masterpiece of production and direction, and is a must-see for all moviegoers.

Sunday School LESSON

By William E. Gilroy, D. D.
 Since Jacob, driven by famine, went down into Egypt to share food and prosperity with his famous son, Joseph, the Jews have been wanderers.
 Today countless thousands of Jews wander across the face of the earth seeking homes, lost loved ones and above all, peace. With in the glowing pages of Ezra and Nehemiah is being duplicated today in Palestine.

 When Jerusalem was completed, there were many well-to-do Jews who had established themselves in Babylon and preferred to remain there. We have evidence of a similar situation in various lands today where Jews are doing much to encourage and support the new Israeli state but are reluctant to leave newly-found friends.
 Among those held prisoner today by despotic rulers or desperate circumstances, there exists the same inexorable sadness described in the 137th Psalm which captures the despondency of imprisonment and exile.

Still another parallel: after the Babylonians seized the Southern Kingdom of Judah, they gradually grew more kindly disposed toward their captives. As a result, Jewish culture had a chance to flourish, developing such hardness that it lasted until the eleventh century of the Christian era, A. D. Among Jews in Western Europe, a revitalized art movement has been noted.
 The story of the return from Babylon, and the restoration is told as is well known, in the Biblical books of Ezra and Nehemiah. Though the story in its main events and ultimate issues can be easily apprehended, the consecutive or-

Three major river systems cross Nebraska from west to east: the Niobrara, Platte, and Republican. I think the explanation lies in the fact that there were two attempts at restoration, the first of which failed, leaving a lapse of some years.
 But the chief point is that the restoration was achieved, and the climax of power and inspiration is in the faith, genius and triumph of Nehemiah, a great leader.

Military Hero Quits Post in Greece

Athens Greece May 31 — (P) — Greece's No. one military hero, 63-year-old Field Marshal Alanand Papagos quit as chief of the nation's armed forces yesterday. His walkout was followed by "minor incidents" and an army alert in Athens.
 Papagos blamed his resignation on ill health. Observers here said maybe it was due to political differences with King Paul.
 Emergency measures were put into effect in Athens last night due — a government announcement on the Athens radio said to day — to reports that an attempt would be made by "anarchist elements at infraction of public order" he radio said the emergency was listed at 8 a m today.
 Officials of the radio station later revealed an army officer and a group of soldiers visited the station this morning and ordered them to delete from a broadcast news of Papagos' resignation.
 The Athens radio later announced attempts at infraction of public order had been isolated and of "no importance".
 Papagos' resignation was the chief topic of the day here. News papers came up with all kinds of explanations as to what really inspired the marshal to make so momentous a decision. No paper accepted ill health as a plausible excuse.
 The news which was received with mixed emotions by the public was considered the most important military development since the suppression of the Communist guerrillas in the fall of 1949.
 Prime Minister Sophocles Venizelos told newsmen Papagos early today had assured him "now that he has resigned he will not mix himself in politics".
 King Paul in a previous state ment had said he accepted Papagos' resignation "with profound regret". In a letter to the aged commander he said he realized however that the marshal's decision was "irrevocable because as you said your state of health does not allow you for the time being to continue to exercise your duties".
 Venizelos said that Papagos' post would be entrusted to the king who is commander of the armed forces under the Greek constitution.
 The resignation came as a surprise to the general public.
 Informed circles said that Papagos has appeared in excellent health of late and expressed belief his resignation is the result of differences with the king dating back to last summer. The monarch reportedly resented alleged efforts of Papagos and politicians associated with him to exercise undue influence on the crown.
 Papagos' resignation comes after a long career of military service dating back to the Balkan war of 1912-13 in which he commanded a battalion. In 1940 Papagos became generalissimo of the Greek army and in the recent Greek civil war he was the master mind behind the Grammos campaign that finally routed the Communist guerrillas.

You in The Church
 The Church In You—
 Form a combination for good. We should attend church regularly. Every man, woman and child needs the influence of the CHURCH. Be Faithful! Be a Churchman.

The Liberty Bell! Washington, Lincoln and Lee; all symbols of freedom under Democratic Rule. What a setting for a good round of education; a teacher trained and devout with a class of eager fellow students ready to speak. This is a real school. Why should not every public school and church school room be thus equipped? It is all too common to find both school and church without any symbols that represent their true purpose and high goal. Imagine a church school without a picture or symbol to represent its faith! Imagine a public school without a picture of Moses, or of Socrates, or of Jesus, or of Thomas Mann, or of John Dewey!

Upon the shoulder of him who would teach rests great responsibility. Tomorrow's leaders are today's students. They may be compassionate or they may be cold. Many times the teacher spells the difference. The noble utterances of great teachers such as listed above should be put into the memory of our school children. They are profound and their words are the golden threads which hold our Democratic system of government together. Why not make special effort to see that our children develop in the presence of such great silent teachers? Our teachers must be supported by the masters of yesterday. What sort of American education can we expect if the growing mind is not exposed to the persons of Washington, and Jefferson, and Lincoln, and Robert E. Lee?
